

Transparency in Government: Exploring Idaho's Open Meeting and Public Records Laws

Stephanie Trebesch
A.P. United States & Comparative Government
American Government
Capital High School
Boise, Idaho

Grade: 12th Grade

Time Allotment: Two 50-minute class periods

Subject Matter: American Government

Overview:

In the private business world, deals are conducted in privacy. In the confines of conference rooms executives reach business decisions behind closed doors. Furthermore, assuming there is no illegal activity; company records and correspondence also have a sphere of privacy. This privacy arrangement does not apply to government. In order to have an effective and operative democracy there has to be a certain amount of transparency of what the government is doing. There are certain key laws that ensure this transparency for all governments – from local, county, state and federal.

Throughout this lesson students will learn and investigate the Idaho Open Meetings Law and the Public Records Law.

Learning Objectives:

Students will be able to;

- Understand and relate the concept of transparency to a democratic system of government.
- Explain what occurs when there is not transparency in a governmental system.
- Know the basic essentials of the Idaho Open Public Meeting law.
- Identify the fundamental rudiments of the Idaho Public Records law
- Formulate and discuss their opinions on possible infringements on this concept of transparency.

References:

- Arendt, Hannah. The Origins of Totalitarianism. New York: HBJ Book, 1971.
 - o This is the predominant source of how totalitarian governments form and rule. Arendt uses both Hitler's Germany and the Soviet Union under Stalin as primary examples.

~ DAY #1 ~

Introductory Activity:

Show students the first slide of the PowerPoint.

- Ask students to brainstorm on their paper what images or thoughts they have of the Soviet Union government.
 - o Make sure the students focus on the government, rather than day-to-day life in the Soviet Union.
- After one minute, have students share their thoughts with a partner.
- As a class, discuss and share their ideas on the Soviet Union government.
 - o When stereotypes are presented, redirect these to the facts.
 - o Students should have a foundation of the Soviet system from their history and economics courses.

Show students the second slide in the PowerPoint.

- Ask students what are some differences in the Soviet style of government and a democracy.
- Although students will more than likely reference their own experience and knowledge of the United States, try to keep the focus just to the system of democracy.
- Student's response will more than likely be focused on the First Amendment in addition to free elections.

Show students the third slide in the PowerPoint.

- Ask students what they think this photo represents. How does it relate to anything that we are discussing in government? Let students think silently about this and then ask for their ideas.
- Positively reinforce all answers as at this stage there is no significant “right” or “wrong” answer.
- If no student came up with the answer of transparency explain the concept of transparency in democratic societies.
- Ask students to list ways they personally have experienced transparency in our government.
- Students will be returning to this list at the end of the lesson to see if they placed Idaho Open Meeting law and Public Records law.

Learning Activity:

- Continue to go through the PowerPoint slides.
- Students will view the skits that pertain to the Open Meeting and Public Records Laws.
- Student should use their note taking skills to take the main points of each slide.
- At the end of the PowerPoint review the key concepts of the Open Meeting and Public Meetings law.
 - o Have students go back their original brainstorm sheet and add the Idaho Open Meeting Law and the Idaho Public Record laws as examples of transparency in government.

Culminating Activity:

- Handout #1 ~ Open Meeting and Public Record – Learning Activity.
 - o Have students work individually on whether or not the different scenarios are a violation or if the request will be granted.
 - o When they are finished have students compare their answers with a partner.

~ DAY #2 ~

Introductory Activity/Review :

- Handout #2 ~ Review of Open Meeting and Public Records Laws
 - o Have students complete the matching exercise.
 - o Go over the answers with students.

- Ask student how this relates to the material that we discussed yesterday.

Learning Activity:

- Handout #3 ~ Roundtable Discussion

- Divide students into groups of three.
- Explain the assignment and answer any questions that students may have.
- Once students have completed this, have groups share their responses.

Final Assessment:

- Handout #4 ~ Open Meeting and Public Record – Assignments
 - Students may choose from the different assignments to show their knowledge of the Open Meeting or Public Record laws.

Extension Activities:

- Handout #5 ~ Enrichment Activity
 - Have students attend a city council meeting. Have – one –two paragraphs detailing what was discussed. Three-paragraph analysis focusing on the theme of transparency.

Roundtable Discussion – The Fine Balance between Transparency and Privacy

Directions:

Select the following positions in your group.

- Reader
 - o The reader will read aloud each scenario for the group.
- Recorder
 - o The recorder will take notes on how the group responded to each scenario.
 - o If there are differing opinions the recorder should note these differences.
- Presenter
 - o The presenter will be called on to articulate the group's opinions towards the closure of class.

Everyone must contribute their thoughts to these scenarios. The discussions should be intelligent, fluid and on-topic conversations. In your response make sure you support your answers with examples.

1.) The Pentagon Papers were classified government documents pertaining to the Vietnam War. The 7000 pages disclosed the government's involvement in the war and showcased inconsistencies in what government leaders were telling the people and what they were actually doing in the war. The Pentagon Papers were leaked to the New York Times in 1971. The government immediately tried to suppress the publication of the Pentagon Papers. National Security Advisor Henry Kissinger commented, "People have got to be put to the torch for this sort of thing." In New York Times Co v. United States (1971) the Supreme Court ruled that the New York Times had the right to publish the papers. Do you agree with this ruling? Why or why not?

2.) In 1966 under the Johnson administration, the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) was passed. The law stipulates that it is each citizen's right to obtain public information concerning federal agencies. Subsequent to the Watergate scandal the act was strengthened. Finally, in 1996 the law was extended to include electronic data. National security information is not included under the FOIA. In May 2007 the National Security Archive filed amicus curiae to the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals. They contend that each judge should individually evaluate whether or not the information sought is truly a national security issue. Do you agree with the National Security Archive's position? Why or why not?

3.) Is it important to you as a voter or future voter to review the tax returns of potentially future presidents? Why or why not?

4.) Google recently announced that they will make public records more accessible in several states via the internet. Opponents are concerned that there may be a breach of Social Security Numbers. While proponents feel that there this creates more transparency and equal access to the government. Do you agree with Google's move? Why or why not?

5.) In the case, Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington v. Executive Office of the Whitehouse (2007) a judge ordered the Executive Office of the President to save and preserve all email within the Whitehouse. Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington are concerned that some of the electronic communication of the Bush Administration is missing. In a time of war, do you agree with the judge's decision? Why or why not?

6.) Under the Campaign Finance Reform Act all campaign contributions are public records. Consequently, if you visit the Open Secrets Organization website you are able to view all contributions to political parties and candidates. Why is this important to government?
