The Boy and The Panther

There was a boy named Christen. He had sky blue eyes and golden hair. He lived on a farm in the Amazon Rainforest.
One day he went walking in the rainforest and he found a baby black panther all alone. He picked the panther up and went back to his farm. He named her Chrystal.
One month later, he took her for a walk in the afternoon. That night Chrystal snuck out and she didn’t know the river was there. She took a step and fell in the river. She floated down the river and came to a waterfall.
She plunged down the waterfall and then a mom capybara saved her by grabbing her with her teeth and pulling the panther out of the freezing water. She didn’t care that the panther was a predator because she cares about babies that don’t have their moms around and she didn’t see the panther’s mom.
The capybara sniffed Chrystal and got a bit of scent of Christen. So, she followed the scent trail back to Christen. Christen saw the capybara with Chrystal and he was so glad to see her.
