Discover the fascinating story of this iconic American garment.
7pm Thursday February 17. See page 13.
Dear Friends,

I’m always thrilled to find a program on KBTC that reveals much more than what I’m expecting and Rivited: The History of Jeans did just that.

If you think about it, who doesn’t own a pair of blue jeans? Yet, the most common article of clothing in existence (half of the people on the planet are most likely wearing them right now) carries with it a unique and tangled story that is embedded in each thread of the iconic garment.

From the method of extracting the rich blue color from the indigo plant to its impact on teen culture and the civil rights movement, this insightful documentary tells the whole story of denim. Revealing a broader history, it asks us to look beyond the romanticism of blue jeans in the Wild West and its impact on fashion through the decades and to acknowledge the silences that have been ignored including its roots in slavery and, later, Asian exclusion as Levi Strauss began manufacturing them in the mid-1800s.

Educational, enlightening, and surprising, this documentary from the filmmakers at American Experience is not to be missed. Be sure to watch Thursday, February 17 at 7pm on KBTC or watch it on the PBS App. And tune in throughout the month for other programs highlighting the history and experience of African Americans in honor of Black History Month.

DeAnne Hamilton
An inspiring look at the 50-year legacy of legendary college star and Vikings wide-receiver Gene Washington. The film unfolds through the eyes of Maya Washington, Gene's daughter, as she uncovers her father's journey and impact of his legacy on the present generation.

Follow Fannie Lou Hamer’s remarkable journey from Mississippi sharecropper to political powerhouse and a voice for millions fighting for the right to vote in 1964.

Is the "American Dream" of home ownership a false promise? This film examines how the American housing policy market has been manipulated for years in discriminatory ways.

Independent Lens: Missing in Brooks County | 11pm Tuesday February 8

Migrants go missing in rural South Texas more than anywhere else in the U.S. For many families whose loved ones have disappeared after crossing the Mexico border, one activist detective is their last hope.
