Kansas City PBS Expands Access to Public Media with Broadcast Livestream

Viewers Can Now Watch Channel 19.1 on KansasCityPBS.org

Kansas City, MO, September 24, 2020 - In an effort to continue to provide public media service to as many viewers as possible, Kansas City PBS has announced an initiative that expands access to public television through a livestream of its current Channel 19.1 broadcast. Viewers can now access live programming anytime, online at kansascitypbs.org/live and within the PBS Video App.

“Providing livestream access to public media is a valuable addition to current efforts” said Kliff Kuehl, President & CEO of Kansas City PBS. “We are excited to offer real-time access to our broadcast stream, expanding this essential service to reach an even larger audience wherever they are, whenever they choose.”

The move to provide further expanded access to public television comes after Kansas City PBS previously announced a partnership with YouTube TV to bring on-demand broadcast programming and kids content to subscribers. KCPBS' locally-produced content is also available on-demand within the PBS Video App.

This initiative furthers our mission to provide trusted, balanced programming, in the form of public affairs, education and entertainment, to the communities in the Kansas City PBS coverage area. Access to the Channel 19.1 broadcast livestream is free and
