George W. Bush: AMERICAN EXPERIENCE
May 4-5 at 8pm
GENERAL MANAGER MESSAGE

Most of the WyomingPBS staff are working from home to flatten the curve. But I want to publicly thank those who cannot work from home and continue to provide “essential services” to the state in this difficult time. The Master Control Operators monitor what goes out on our three channels, record programs for the future, and are working their regular shifts.

The producers and videographers continue to create new shows and live content for you, although using technology and practicing social distancing when possible.

The engineers continue to service our equipment in the studio and in the field, although social distancing is a little easier when working on a mountain peak.

The Foundation and administrative staff continue to visit the office as needed to pick up your generous donations, process invoices, and keep critical paperwork flowing.

And “Thanks!” to everyone on the staff who comes in, when necessary, to keep WyomingPBS operating.

I’m proud of, and humbled by, your dedication.

I hope you, the extended Members of the WyomingPBS family, are taking advantage of all three channels, plus our extensive video on demand library, to keep your minds engaged and your spirits up. I hope parents and teachers are taking advantage of the extensive educational content on WyomingPBS Learning Media.

And I hope you are doing all you can to stay safe. Thank you for watching and thank you for being part of our WyomingPBS family.

The spring brought new challenges to the education community as educators had to find new ways to teach their students through digital classrooms. WyomingPBS always strives to assist our Wyoming educators and during this time continued and strengthened that partnership.

WyomingPBS highlighted digital classroom resources frequently through email and facebook. Carol Garber, WyomingPBS Education Coordinator, hosted live virtual learning experiences for educators through Zoom. These virtual workshops showed educators how to use the PBS LearningMedia platform, which included integrating Google Classroom and Remind, creating lessons, and sharing resources. The events also provided opportunities for educators to share challenges and best practices.

Thank you to all Wyoming Educators for the work, commitment, and passion you have shown your students!
