“Engagement” has become a popular publicity tactic since the emergence of social media. It’s measured in likes and shares, and marketers around the world covet it. It’s become a buzzword for success.

Public media has been thriving for decades because we’ve always been cultivating engagement—it’s in our business model and our mission statement!

Prairie Public’s audiences are our partners and sources of content. It’s a relationship that depends on engagement. We chronicle your region’s history and plan for your future. We turn statistics, facts, and figures into elegantly shaped stories—your stories.

But wait! Your story may not be your neighbor’s story! Well, that’s where the magic of public media engagement really excels. Public media respects all its constituents and acknowledges all people as active builders of our society. It honors the promise of democracy—that we all can assert ourselves as individuals and also work with others to move forward together. It uses fact-based, nonpartisan (and entertaining!) television, radio, digital, and educational services to foster civil conversation and to lift up our communities’ collective health.

Engagement doesn’t need to be complicated. It’s all about cultivating and truly listening to our communities. It’s about producing media that is relevant and reflective of your world—it meets your needs. And it’s understanding that our mission as a public service must value and include the public in its processes and practices.

While others use engagement to build advertising revenue, public media uses engagement to build connections. All parties win in this kind of environment.

Your “driveway moments” are textbook examples of engagement—you can’t leave your car until you’ve heard a radio report to the end, and you can’t wait to find others to share and discuss what you’ve heard.

We know how it is. We’re public media fans, too, and we have driveway moments all the time.

Thank you for “engaging” with Prairie Public!

John E. Harris III
Prairie Public
President & CEO
Public media is adventurous, responsive, and independent. It respects the audience, encourages lifelong learning, and invites civil discourse. Through Prairie Public’s long history in the prairie region, we have held tight to these media values and the partnerships that we’ve fostered with our audience.

Resources for educators strengthen our region’s classrooms with accessible and relevant tools, support our teachers with free professional development, and inspire our students to excel with digital media.

Timely, fact-based reports from news director Dave Thompson and the Prairie Public radio news team keep you informed and curious.

Original television productions fulfill Prairie Public’s mission all year long. In 2018, Prairie Musicians and Prairie Mosaic entertained, The Rise and Fall of the Nonpartisan League educated, and The Opioid Epidemic: Seeking Solutions in North Dakota and Prairie Pulse informed.
Every day throughout the year, Prairie Public brings inquisitive individuals together—to help understand our world and to celebrate our shared humanity. Our viewers and listeners provide the stories that strengthen and transform our worldview—to help us all understand who we are, have been, and can be.

Informative, intelligent programs are always a recipe for your success. Public media is where you discover something new every day—with tours of the world’s finest museums, performances from renowned concert halls, and how-to, nature, and science programs acknowledged as the best available.

Radio podcasts in your pocket and Prairie Public on your smart speaker meet you where you live and how you listen.

Neighborhood conversations like the “Ask A...” event and daily radio discussions on Main Street help us make connections with others in our community and break everyone out of their echo chambers.

Other endowment funds that are held on Prairie Public’s behalf reside at Fargo-Moorhead Area Foundation, North Dakota Community Foundation, and The Winnipeg Foundation.

These professionally managed funds provide annual interest income that helps to ensure the future of Prairie Public and enhances the quality of programming, education services, and outreach services Prairie Public provides to those in our region.

1. Prairie Public Prairie Public’s high-definition schedule.
2. World/Lifelong Learning Channel
   Nonfiction, science, nature, news, and public affairs programs on World (6pm-6am); and how-to, travel, cooking, and K-12 classroom programs on Lifelong Learning (6am-6pm).
3. The MN Channel Programs produced in and about North Dakota, Manitoba, Minnesota, and the region.
4. PBS Kids The number one educational media brand for kids offers opportunities to explore new ideas and new worlds through television.
