This Peanut Headz episode of Black History Toonz features, "How George Washington Carver Saved the South." "Superficie" A response to our connections between the natural and man-made world. Superficie plays with surfaces, touch, textures, movement, and sounds that are both internalized and externalized. "On the Note of Humanity & Unity" A tender ode to the inner world that fuels our strength and the caring hand we all need during turbulent times. "Mooring" For more than 30 years, people have been living on their boats in the mooring field off Dinner Key Marina. Some choose a life on the water. For others, it's a calling. In Mooring, Mike reflects on life on his boat and the winding channels that brought him to the water. "Offline" When your relationship to the internet changes, from a place of exploration and opportunity to a place of collective action and reaction, it can become challenging to locate the Self. I sit with plants and allow them to show me who they are and how I should engage with them without a single word. It is within them that I find the blueprint of life on this confusing planet, it is within them that I feel most my Self. "Mommy, will you play with me?" An uncanny child wrests mother's attention from a Zoom meeting.

10:00PM Independent Lens - Owned: A Tale of Two Americas
Owned: A Tale of Two Americas weaves together the history of mid-century housing policy in America and the ramifications of the 2008 housing market collapse. In 2008, the U.S. housing market became the epicenter of an unprecedented global economic collapse. In the years since, protests in cities across the country have highlighted the stark racial disparities that define much of America. The crash of suburbia and urban unrest are not unrelated, the seeds of each germinated by the United States' post-war housing policy. Over time, racist policies have created subcultures in our built environments that are inherently vulnerable and makes clear our society can't continue to thrive in a segregated state. The stories of a retired New York City police officer, an eccentric Southern California realtor, and an ambitious real estate developer in Baltimore embody the promise of U.S. housing policies and the systematic oppression still plaguing many American cities. Ultimately, the communities created by the country's housing history may have more in common than they expect. (Next Air 02/09/2022 03:00AM)

10:30PM  Legacy of Love
Repeate of  02/06/2022 06:30PM
Taking stylistic cues from narrative filmmaking, this documentary reveals the romantic relationship between Coretta Scott and Martin Luther King, Jr. when they met as college students; where they came from, where they went and what they were doing; and their dreams for a life of activism and family. From the beginning, they were committed to making the country a better place. In the end, they made the world a better place. The film shows that history and makes it relevant to today's audiences - utilizing living witnesses, interactive storytelling and graphic animation. Legacy of Love uses historical dramatizations with actors, authentic period wardrobe and props; 4K cinematography; rare historic archival footage and images of the Kings in their early years; and interviews with people who knew the Kings in the early 1950's and have never been interviewed before for a film of this scope.

This Grammy nominated artist now tells her dramatic, miraculous and deeply moving story about a life worth living with her memoir Weeds Like Us. On this Special Event Broadcast of WoodSongs, Janiva will read and discuss her book plus perform songs from her new album Change in the Weather Janiva Magness Sings John Fogerty.
