Teresa, Katrina and the Dragon

One very sunny day, Teresa and her sister, Katrina were taking a walk on a cloud. They were unicorns that could fly. They were exploring the clouds to see if there was another country in the sky.
That was when Teresa found a dragon named Nelly. Nelly got scared and flew away. Teresa called for her sister Katrina to come over and see. “I found a dragon. I wonder if there were more dragons living here.” Katrina replied, “I think so, maybe they're nice.”
And then they flew down to earth to tell the other unicorns what they had found. The other unicorns said, “We think the dragons are nice.” Several days later when Teresa and Katrina were planting a garden for food, they could not dig the soil. The other unicorns tried to help but they couldn’t dig either. The soil was too hard.
Nelly was watching the unicorns from the clouds. She flew down and asked if they needed help. She said, “Sorry I ran away. I was really scared because I had never seen unicorns before.” One unicorn said, “It's okay, we have never seen a dragon before, either.”
Katrina said, “The garden soil is too tough for us to dig. Could you dig for us?” Nelly said, “Yes, we can make it beautiful.” Together they planted a beautiful garden of flowers, wheat, and tomatoes. The dragon and unicorns picked the fruit when they were ripe and had a feast.
Then another dragon flew down and said, “Oh hello unicorns. My daughter Nelly told us that there are unicorns exploring up there. She told me they were nice.” Teresa told the mother dragon that unicorns sometimes were sleepy. They were staying up late at night to guard the town, so they could warn the others if they saw predators.
The dragon made a wall with a secret exit and entrance so if unicorns stayed inside they wouldn't be eaten. The unicorns thanked them for the protection. They visited each other and lived happily ever after.
