Family dynamics are a primary driver of success – or failure – as we age. This documentary follows four millennials, each paired with one of their parents, as they simulate being 85 by wearing an MIT-produced “aging empathy suit” and sitting with professional make-up artists. After the shock of feeling and seeing themselves decades older, the families grapple with the realizations, conversations, actions, and mindset required to age successfully.