

UNPACKING CAMBRIDGE

JANUARY 5 AT 9PM

In its heyday, Cambridge's Philips Packing House was the largest cannery in the world and the engine that drove the economic and social fabric on Maryland's Eastern Shore. But when it abruptly shuttered in the early 1960s, the building – and the community around it – deteriorated. Today, the Packing House is being revitalized as a hub for food and innovation that is poised to once again alter the region's economy. This program explores the area's intriguing and explosive history – and its commonalities with so many other communities in this country.
