

“Betrayed”

It made my husband an orphan. We are hoping to visit the country we were born in next year or so as our first time going back in about 40 years. We are hoping to be able to visit his mom's grave if it's still there. Was that war necessary or is it just a struggle of power between some of the most powerful countries. You have not only sacrificed your young men and women but so many of our people died for not much that was gained. Maysoua chose four words to define her experience: sad, angry, betrayed, and hopeless.

—Maysoua, Hartford, WI