

“Secret”

I was in country between November 1969 and November 1970. I was assigned to the 372 Radio Research Unit in Cu Chi, Vietnam. Radio Research was a cover name for the Army Security Agency that was not allowed in country. Our units existed throughout the country. We all had top secret security clearances and engaged in electronic information gathering using a variety of measures. It's only recently that some of our work has been declassified and has been published. A good example is the book Unlikely Warriors by Lonnie Long and Gary Blackburn (2013) published by iUniverse. My story is that of all members of Radio Research units, complete silence. We could not talk about our work or experiences outside a secure compound and even then, it was on a need-to-know basis.
