

"Trauma"

I'm a person now in my 80's, who was born and raised in England, and I was a child of 9 years when WWII started in 1939. We were shunted around from pillar to post to try to avoid being in a potential bombing area. My then husband, now deceased, and to whom I was married at the age of 23, and he being 16 years older than I, served in that war from 1939 to 1945, and when released had no counseling whatsoever. We both suffered the consequences.

I can still remember the details of that War better than I can remember what happened last week. I know that the Vietnam war was an undeclared and different kind of war, and even though it was not fought on home ground, the trauma of the homecoming veterans would be just as mind shattering.

I can still remember the details of that War better than I can remember what happened last week. I know that the Vietnam war was an undeclared and different kind of war, and even though it was not fought on home ground, the trauma of the homecoming veterans would be just as mind shattering.

I hope you don't mind me sharing my thoughts on the results of any war where young men and women are sent to become gun fodder.

—Mary