Unie and cloudy

By Farrah Buswell
Unie and Cloudy are best friends. They are both clouds. Unie is always shaped like a unicorn, but Cloudy changes all the time. Cloudy asks why Unie never changes.
"It's because I can't," says Unie.
"But we could play more games if we were the same," Cloudy says.
Unic likes being different.

"I can still do all the important cloud things."

Cloudy is grumpy and confused.
Unie is sad for Cloudy.
She tries to change.
She tries harder.
She tries as hard as she can, but she still can't change.
Now Unie is confused too.
Cloudy sees that his friend can't change.
He feels a little sad for Chip.
"It's okay that we're different," Cloudy says.
We can still play all our favorite games.
We can have fun even though we're different.
Unie feels happy about that.

"Maybe sometimes you can change into a unicorn so we can be the same sometimes," Unie says.
"Yes, that would be nice," Cloudy says. Then they played their favorite games and were still best friends.
Unie and Cloudy

By Farrah Buswell

The illustrations in this book were created by drawing each element separately, cutting them out, then using a photocopier to create a single illustration.

About the Author

Farrah goes to first grade at Lincoln Elementary in Canton, Illinois. She enjoys playing outside with her friends, practicing karate, and doing math. Mo Willems, Anna Dewdney, and Jane O’Connor are some of her favorite authors. Her favorite PBS shows are Odd Squad, Dinosaur Train, and Wild Kratts.