By: Shealee Trent
Illustrated by: Shealee Trent

The Ink Spill!
The Ink Spill!

Once upon a time there was a family of pens. There was a dad, mom, and their son Inky. Inky's dad worked with the newspaper company. Inky's mom was a writer, she wrote children's books. Their son Inky would be going to Kindergarten.

It was the first day of school. Inky was so excited. He couldn't wait to meet his teacher Ms. Penny. When he got to school, there were a lot of kids; they were playing, coloring, and laughing while telling jokes. Inky was a bit shy but he had to be brave so he walked in and he put his backpack away. He sat at his desk quietly.

Soon it was writing time. The class had to write all about themselves and after the class wrote about themselves they had to draw a picture.
So Inky began to write, but suddenly the ink bursted all over his paper! Everyone laughed at him; he was so embarrassed. He cried in his mom's lap when he got home. He never wanted to write ever again!

Inky grew older, and true to his word, he had never written again then, something very unexpected happened. His mom became very sick. She had to go to the hospital and get an ink infusion. Inky was scared; he didn't want his mom to be sick! When Inky went to see his mom at the hospital, she told him, "Son, please finish my book I started writing, I will be in this hospital for a long time." Inky wasn't so sure. He was still scared that he might burst his ink all over the paper if he wrote again, but he
He published it and everyone loved it. The kids and his mom and dad loved it. Finally, with the help of his mom and dad, Inky finished the book. His dad asked, "Inky, you'll have to help him clean up the mess."

"Then his father said, "Son, we all make mistakes. You only fail if you give up."

The next day, his mother asked, "Inky, do you know how important this was to my mom?"

"I knew she had only written a few lines when the ink spread across the paper. Immediately, his father was laughing."

"What was he thinking? He couldn't do it before he knew it, his father was there to help him clean up the mess."

"Inky spread across the paper. Immediately, thoughts of Kindergarten came flashing back. All he could hear was laughter."

"He went to her office, grabbed the book she had started, and began to write. "
He told his parents all about the book and how he wrote the rest. He decided that he would become a writer, and he did. He wrote 15 books!

The End